Activity Description

Your students will love using alliteration with this fun poetry lesson. For this activity they will head outside and choose a variety of different items for them to describe and complete the table. Once they have done a few items they can piece together their alliteration poem.

This lesson will help students to understand what alliteration is and how to use it in their own writing.

Teaching Structure

- Check that your class know what alliteration is. Give a recap if needed.
- Explain that they will be going outside to create their own alliteration poems.
- Share the table with them that they must complete and go through one or two examples (one lovely long leaf).
- Give students time to explore the outdoors and create their poems.
- Extension: Once they've completed the table they can write their poem up in neat on a big piece of paper. They can make a great display.
